Background:

- PhD, Clinical Psychology
- Director of psychiatric rehabilitation practitioners program
- Coordinator of Rehabilitation Readiness training and dissemination project in Israel

Research Interests:

- Bridging recovery processes & positive psychology
- Mental Health Peer providers
- Recovery-oriented relationship

Publications:

Moran, G.S., Oz G., Kamiel-Miller, O. Why tell them? Psychiatrists’ challenges in considering diagnosis disclosure of Schizophrenia. Qualitative Health Research. Accepted.

SELECT STUDY

- This qualitative study investigated mental health peer-providers personal benefits from engaging in peer work roles.
- Benefits to one’s wellness were identified in a foundational, emotional, spiritual, social, and occupational wellness domains.
- In addition, specific peer role characteristics and work environments were identified that facilitated the accruement of these benefits.
- Specifically the peer work role of telling and reauthoring one’s personal story to help others was found to have profound effect on transformation of a stigmatized experience into a source of competence and positive identity.