L. Summary of my Activities and Future Plans

Over the course of my career, I have dedicated myself academically and professionally to the welfare and health of the Arab population. I have focused on this population specifically and been involved in comparing Jews and Arabs in terms of social needs, health problems and service delivery systems. I decided that the welfare needs of the Arab population in Israel are such that it is necessary to cover a broad spectrum of social problems rather than focus in one specific area. The comparative perspective with the Jewish population seems strategically important, as it reflects crucial policy issues such as differential allocation of resources and universal features of social problems in Israel. From this perspective, I consider my work to be action research which is meant to address social problems from an evidence based practice perspective and give voice to groups which are voiceless. I further focused my recent work on the health and mental health needs of the Arab population and particularly marginalized population groups, such as the young and the elderly.

My studies on the welfare and health of the Arab population include work on how Arab women cope with breast cancer and their willingness to undergo screenings are presented in articles no. 49, 42, 61 and 62; the latter is an integrative paper (Factors Associated with Low Screening for Breast Cancer in the Palestinian Authority: Relations of Availability, Environmental Barriers and Cancer-Related Fatalism). Additional studies on health and welfare in the Arab population include Disordered eating related behaviors among Arab schoolgirls in Israel: An epidemiological study (33); Health beliefs and attendance for early breast cancer detection among Arab women (32), Adolescent girls in distress: views from Arab female adolescents living in Israel (30), Parent-child relationships as perceived by Arab adolescents living in Israel (27), Patterns of labor division among Palestinian families in the West Bank (22), The aging of Israel's Arab population: Needs, existing responses, and dilemmas in the development of services for a society in transition (24), Effectiveness of helplines among socio-political minorities: A view from both sides of the line (23, 19ab), Attitudes of Israeli Arab social workers concerning woman battering: The relationship between responsibility, societal reaction and legitimization of violence (20), Appropriateness of the helpline as a mode of service delivery in minority communities: The case of the Arab population in Israel (50), and Emotional Reactions of Arab Lay Persons to a Person with Alzheimer's Disease (55). I have also been involved in ongoing research on substance use among the Arab population (e.g. Error! Reference source not found., 51, 47, 43, 39). An integrative article with findings from many of my studies on the welfare and health of the Arab population was published in 2013 (74).

In addition, I have initiated and encouraged colleagues to collaborate with me in several pioneering comparative studies between Arab and Jews. These include Colorectal Cancer Screening Patterns, Intentions, and Predictors in Jewish and Arab Israelis (45); Health-Promoting Behaviors and Health Locus of Control from a Multicultural Perspective (38); Consideration of Out-of-Home Placement among Israeli Jewish and Arab Parents of Children with Disabilities: A National Study 31); Meanings of the concept 'self-help' among Jewish and Arab students living in Israel (26), Knowledge and attitudes towards AIDS: A comparison between Arab and Jewish professionals living in Israel (22) and Working with families whose children have disabilities: Service provision by Jewish and Arab Israeli Social Workers (21a). I am also committed to disability rights of all people with disabilities in Israel and therefore wrote with colleagues articles on Quality of Life of Israeli Adults with Borderline Intelligence Quotient and Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (36) and on Israel's Equal Rights for Persons with Disabilities Law: Current Status and Future Directions (29). I also study how Arabs and Jews deal with cancer and early screening: Early breast cancer detection practices, health beliefs and cancer worries in Jewish and Arab women (28). Finally, I was involved for several years in an initiative on bilingual education in Israel; several articles based on work done as part of this have been published (50, 48, 37 & 35).

While researching these areas, my involvement in public leadership and academic administration has remained strong. I have served in several public capacities, including mayor of a local municipality (Daburiya), chairman of the board of the association of community centers, member of the Labor and Social Affairs committee for the improvement of the rights of the disabled and founder of “Sikkuy,” an NGO dealing with equal opportunities for Jewish and Arabs. In 2002 I was appointed a member of the Council for Higher Education (Malag) as well as a member of the MAOF foundation for encouraging the acceptance of Arab faculty in Israeli Academic Institutions. I was a member of Malag for ten years and now serve as Vice Chair of the Planning & Budgeting Committee (Vatat). I was the Head of the Jewish-Arab Center at the University of Haifa for seven years, ending in 2009. In this capacity I made every effort to contribute to a helpful and balanced dialogue between Jews and Arabs, students and faculty alike.

In the future, I plan to continue focusing on the welfare and health of Arab population and comparisons with other groups in Israeli society. I am interested in the ways the Arab population deals with specific health and mental health problems. I would summarize my intellectual commitment as one of a combined interest in research and practice devoted to cultural and social needs of marginalized minorities in general and vulnerable Arab populations in particular.
